Author Cynthia Harriman has been there--England, France, Spain--and done that: a husband, two kids, and four months of travel. This book answers important questions such as "Why take your kids to Europe?" and then tells you how to do it. Of the "Why?" Harriman writes, "The best family travel involves staying put, taking it slowly, learning more about everyday life. Leave the kids behind, and you're on vacation in Europe. Take them along and you're temporarily living in Europe." The "How?" is laid out in 22 practical chapters that are truly fun to read, accented by useful tidbits from other world travelers who have globetrotted with kids. This book is an essential resource for anyone considering or preparing to embark on a family journey.
