He has set out to make her understand how much he cares for her and how much his world shattered when she left so many years ago. Will he be able to become a permanent fixture in her life again? Does she have feelings for him? Has too much time passes between them?

He knows that Timala has to go bury her mother but, being that she wants to go alone he is not convinced that is the only she is going home. Even though he told her he would stay home he follows her to see exactly what she is up to. Will he find what he expects? Will he be able to stay in the shadows and go undected? Is she being completely honest about why she is going back home?
