The Coming of Post-Industrial Society: A Venture in Social Forecasting Daniel Bell

In 1976, Daniel Bell's historical work predicted a vastly different society developing—one that will rely on the “economics of information” rather than the “economics of goods.” Bell argued that the new society would not displace the older one but rather overlies some of the previous layers just as the industrial society did not completely eradicate the agrarian sectors of our society. The post-industrial society's dimensions would include the spread of a knowledge class, the change from goods to services and the role of women. All of these would be dependent on the expansion of services in the economic sector and an increasing dependence on science as the means of innovating and organizing technological change. Bell prophetically stated in The Coming of the Post-Industrial Society that we should expect “... new premises and new powers, new constraints and new questions—with the difference that these are now on a scale that had never been previously imagined in world history.”
